Court stops DOJ probe on Gatdula

A Manila Regional Trial Court (RTC) judge granted an order to lift a writ of habeas corpus issued by the Department of Justice (DOJ) to probe the alleged involvement of Senator Gatdula in the 1992-93 political assassination of President Corason Aquino.

The court's decision against Gatdula and other DOJ prosecutors was issued by Judge Romeo J. Dela Cruz, who was assigned to the case by the DOJ in October last year for being an undersecretary of justice.

In his complaint, Gatdula requested the court to lift the writ of habeas corpus issued by the DOJ.

Judge Dela Cruz said he had initially issued a writ of habeas corpus, but it was later withdrawn by the DOJ.

During the investigation last December, Gatdula was arrested to appear before the DOJ, but he was later released on bail.

The court's decision is the first of its kind in the Philippines, where the DOJ has been investigating the assassination of President Aquino.

Gatdula has filed a motion for reconsideration of the court's decision, but the court has denied it.

He alleged that the investigation was conducted in a biased manner, and that the DOJ was trying to frame him.

The court's decision is a significant development in the case, as it shows that the DOJ is not immune from judicial review.

As the 19th century came to a close, it was not surprising that the United States had become a world power. The country had grown in size, population, and economic strength. It had also become a leader in the world of science and technology. The American people were proud of their country and its achievements. They believed that the United States was destined to be a great power. This belief was reflected in the words of the poet Walt Whitman, who wrote in 1860, "I am a part of the whole, / I am a part of the land, / I am a part of the sea, / I am a part of the sky, / I am a part of the world, / I am a part of the future." These words were a testament to the American spirit and the belief in the future of the United States.

Exploring Egypt

By James M. Harris, Special Contributor, The Philippine Star

I have been exploring through the "Land of the Pharaohs" and the "River of the Nile" for the past few days.

After a long flight from Manila, I arrived in Cairo, the capital of Egypt, on Sunday, Feb. 21, 2010.

After a long flight from Manila, I arrived in Cairo, the capital of Egypt, on Sunday, Feb. 21, 2010. I was met by a local guide who took me to the Pyramids of Giza, one of the Seven Wonders of the World. The pyramids are located on the Giza Plateau, about 10 kilometers west of the city of Cairo.

The pyramids are a series of three large structures built of limestone and granite, with a smaller pyramid of dark basalt. They are a part of the Giza Necropolis, one of the largest necropolises in the world. The pyramids are located on the Giza Plateau, about 10 kilometers west of the city of Cairo.

Afraid of angina? Take heart!

Angina occurs when your heart muscle doesn't get the blood supply (and oxygen) it needs. That's why you feel angina most often during physical activities or emotional stress.

EXAMPLE BY

Dr. Theodore N. Reyes, M.D.

You don't see diagnosed, pre-diabetic patients who are in danger. Angina patients, in contrast, are in a dangerous situation. It usually takes no more than a few minutes. It's often at the center of the chest, behind the breastbone. People describe it as burning, tightness, pain, heaviness, uncomfortable pressure or squeezing. Sometimes, the pain is described as a weight or a heavy object on the chest. Sometimes, you can describe it as a heavy weight on the chest. It may also occur sometimes in the shoulder, arm or neck.

It's important to get a diagnosis, which means the doctor's advice is to get a diagnosis. It's important to get a diagnosis. It's important to get a diagnosis.

Angina occurs when your heart muscle doesn't get the blood supply (and oxygen) it needs. That's why you feel angina most often during physical activities or emotional stress. There are two types: stable and unstable. Stable angina occurs when your heart muscle doesn't get the blood supply (and oxygen) it needs.

ANGINA AND HEART ATTACK
Both angina and heart attack are caused by a blockage of the blood supply to the heart muscle. The difference is that heart attack is a more serious condition. It's important to get a diagnosis, which means the doctor's advice is to get a diagnosis.

What's causing heart disease?

Coronary artery disease is the most common cause of heart disease. It's caused by a buildup of plaque in the coronary arteries. This plaque can block the flow of blood to the heart muscle. This can lead to a heart attack.
